

ABSTRACT

A light source for an image writing apparatus which can reduce the number of units without sacrifice in sufficient accuracy, and does not need an accurate alignment, and production method for the light source. The light source for the image writing apparatus forms an image by light emitted from light emitting elements provided on a specific substrate onto a photosensitive drum, wherein light emitting elements are disposed in a zigzag manner on one sheet of the substrate.